

Sadé Ali, MA, CADC, CCS, the recently- retired Deputy Commissioner of Philadelphia's Department of Behavioral Health and Intellectual disAbility Services, is now the President of First Nations, LLC, a behavioral health training and consulting organization in Delaware. She is also a Senior Associate with the Altarum Institute in Washington, DC, providing training and technical assistance to Tribal Governments and other providers engaged in SAMHSA's Access to Recovery (ATR) initiative. Ms. Ali holds faculty positions at Brown University, Temple University's College of Health Professions and Drexel University's School of Public Health. She is a member of the SAMHSA/CSAT National Advisory Council under the Department Health and Human Services. Ms. Ali has traveled the US and Canada extensively providing training on healing from intergenerational trauma for Native American/First Nations people and culturally appropriate recovery management and resilience-promoting training in both the mental health and addictions fields. She has published her thesis, other scholarly articles, and a textbook on culturally appropriate recovery/resilience services, the ending of health disparities through enhanced access to care, and the efficacy of these approaches in the field. She is one of the co-authors of the Philadelphia Behavioral Health Transformation Practice Guidelines for Recovery and Resilience Oriented Treatment, a framework for the fields of mental health and addictions treatment services that is used worldwide. She recently published Social Healing Words-Using Language to Promote Recovery and Resilience for Individuals, Families and Communities. Ms. Ali has been in the field of behavioral health services for over 4 decades. Ms. Ali holds a Bachelor of Arts in Counseling Psychology and a Master of Arts in Clinical Psychology. She is a lifetime member of the Society of American Indian Government Employees (SAIGE) and is proudly affiliated with the Mi'kmaq First Nations, Nova Scotia, Canada.

